

I was inspired to write the following warning:
 "Will he remember who you are?...once you
 bring back the car
 One should be careful what you say...after a glass of Chardonnay
 You could find yourself at sea ...on a mission,
 just like me.
 (Is the car the new Pretty Woman in his life?)

where I was staying if anyone would like to play a round with me. One woman joined me – her name turned out to be Ann Carson, whose ancestors came from County Antrim in Ireland. We got on so well and at the end of the game she said “we must be related, I can feel it.” So Ann is checking through her genealogy. I also stayed on a farm in Oregon and was made so welcome – didn’t want to leave! I found people were friendly to me once they knew I was on my own. Husband back in NZ couldn’t stay home alone any longer and finally ended my solo mission in time to experience the Route 66 Museum in Clinton Oklahoma. We cruised on by Amarillo into New Mexico, onto the 25 mile drive through the amazing Petrified Forest, where polite guards make sure no bits of forest are carted away by tourists. Then, a visit to see the huge meteor crater before driving towards the southern end of the Grand Canyon – into snow and picture perfect moments. Through early morning snow to the Hoover Dam and Lake Mead, then into the dry afternoon Nevada heat. A must-stop was the Carroll Shelby Museum in Las Vegas with “Pretty Miss Shelby” attracting admirers wherever we parked. At last - Clovis California for Miss Shelby’s trip home to Pukekohe. The perfect finale to the Shelby Mission? My husband’s face lighting up when the Shelby Cobra GT500 arrived safely home.
